Pioneer Roses

The pioneers have gone away,
But where their children used to play,
The yellow roses bloom today!

The cabin logs have turned to soil.
No thing remains of daily toil,
Except this rose, steadfast and loyal!

By Laird Fetzer Hamblin

- 5. (Twelve to Eighteen years) Copy This Poem in Cursive (Handwritten) Once

Whenever I Think About Pioneers

Whenever I think about pioneers,
I think about brave women and men
I like to remember that children came too
I would like to have been a child then.

Yes, I'd like to have played all the games that they played
And joined in their fun.
And I'd like to have slept under bright starry skies
When each day's measured journey was done.

I would like to have sung with the pioneers.
With their voices loud and strong
"Hosanna, Hosanna. We've found our new home."
Joy and thankfulness filled their song.
